

Gainesville Sun
August 22, 2002

Enneking recognized by orthopaedic group

■ William F. Enneking, M.D., a distinguished service professor emeritus of orthopaedic surgery at the UF College of Medicine, has been recognized by the American Orthopaedic Association as an outstanding teacher and clinician in orthopaedic medicine. Enneking was awarded the first American Orthopaedic Association-Smith & Nephew Endoscopy Distinguished Clinician Educator Award of $25,000 and a plaque.

Enneking has been recognized for developing pioneering treatments for bone and muscle diseases, including a limb-saving treatment for bone cancers. He is a past president of the American Orthopaedic Association.

Bluck named award recipient

■ UF Psychology Professor Susan Bluck is this year's recipient of the Spring Early Career Achievement Award in Research on Adult Development and Aging.

The award, which is sponsored by the American Psychological Association's Division on Adult Development and Aging, honors a psychologist whose work has made significant early career contributions to understanding critical issues in adult development and aging.

Bluck is affiliated with UF's Center for Gerontological Studies and the Institute on Aging.

Kosch

Antonelli

Kosch, Antonelli elected to posts

■ Two UF faculty members have been elected to leadership positions in the College of Medicine Faculty Council for the 2002-2003 academic year.

Shae Graham Kosch, Ph.D., a professor of community health and family medicine, was chosen president-elect of the council by a faculty vote. She will take post as council president for the 2003-2004 academic year.

Patrick Antonelli, M.D., an associate professor of otolaryngology, was elected vice president.

Borrero recognized for research

■ John Borrero, a doctoral student in psychology at UF, recently received the Sidney Bijou Fellowship Award from the Association for Behavior Analysis.

UF ACHIEVERS

Borrero is conducting a series of studies on the effects of parental attention as reinforcement for common childhood disruptive behavior and for appropriate alternative behavior.

Shugan and Xie co-author 'best paper'

■ Two members of UF's marketing faculty were recently honored at the 2002 INFORMS Marketing Science conference

Hospital auxiliary p

The Shands at University of Florida : of nursing and other health-related chairman, left, and Robbie Hedges, r Laura Frakey, Chad Betters, Kristen